Chairman Wheeler,

The FCC has always been a champion for competition in the telecommunications industry. I am writing today in hopes you and your colleagues will maintain that public interest position.

As the President of Universal Home Protection (UHP), the leading home warranty provider in the State of Wisconsin, I know firsthand the importance and benefits of competition in the business marketplace. With headquarters in Madison, WI, UHP maintains a dedicated focus on customer care, responsiveness to our clients and to building a service reputation of excellence.

To accomplish our mission, we rely on having a choice of voice and Internet providers that compete for our business. With competition, providers offer a variety of options and solutions and at different cost points. As a result, we have chosen a provider in TDS that delivers not only the most reliable technology, but also the best service and price for our needs.

Technology is evolving at a break-neck pace which makes having an open marketplace even more critical. Internet-based communications such as TDS' Managed IP service offers such possibilities, but innovation won't happen without both technology and competition. In addition, regulatory oversight from time-to-time ensures the marketplace operates in a fair and equitable manner.

Please help ensure that UHP will continue to have a robust choice in communications providers. The power of competition means a business like ours can select the products, services, and support our need to thrive now, and in the future.

Sincerely,

James Imhoff III
President
